Must have been that summer 1959

He was handed the promise of freedom if he could stay alive

It was 15 years later, he looked into my eyes

Handed me that promise and it died when he died

I was born to fail and find deeper paths

Deeper than my wounds

Deeper than heritage

Your love runs always deeper

In the icy grip of winter 1993

I awakened into a new life, unknown liberty

But the new clothes they gave me would not grow as i grew

Like a seed in the desert's arms Lord, still your love breaks through

I was born to fail and find deeper paths

Deeper than my soul

Deeper than religion

Your love runs always deeper
